

Call for Participants!

For Odyssey Works: New York, a day-long, interdisciplinary performance.

---

The Event:

A day-long performance created for a single participant, based on the way that participant sees the world. If your application is chosen, we will create this for you alone, free of charge.

Part experimental theater, part artistic procession, and part psychological journey, Odyssey Works: New York will happen only once and will have as its protagonist a single participant for whom the artists and actors are supporting characters in a fully immersive performance.

In previous journeys, participants have found themselves in rowboats crossing the river Styx to the underworld, happened upon a tunnel echoing with recordings of their own thoughts, or been asked to conduct an orchestra of screams, laughs and tears. What will happen this time is a closely guarded secret.

Who You Are:

Participants must be over 18 and available to participate in a daylong performance starting in New York City on April 16-17, 2011. Participants must also be willing to open their lives to us in preparation through a series of questionnaires, conversations, and interviews.

Who We Are:

Odyssey Works is an interdisciplinary collaborative arts and performance group that explores the boundary between artist and audience. Directed by Abraham Burickson, Odyssey Works has been producing large-scale productions for small audiences since 2001. This is the group's first East Coast production. Odyssey Works: New York is sponsored by grants from the Cornell Council on the Arts and the Risley College for the Creative and Performing Arts. For more information, and to see video of past participants, point your web browser to www.odysseyworks.org

The Catch:

There is no catch. Participation is completely free. If you are interested in having a performance created for you, please email applications@odysseyworks.org for an application. You may also simply download one from the www.odysseyworks.org by clicking on "APPLY". Inquiries can also be sent to this address. Be sure to include your contact information.
